

Good day,

I writing to say that allowing cell phone use on the aircraft will do nothing but cause major problems. Some people will talk very loud and distrub other passengers and problems will occur. We have enough domestic problems now with husband wife fights. We have problems now with passengers who don't want to bring their seat backs up during eating.

If you remember the Long Island Railroad changed to no cell phone use was because people were complaining about people talking too loud on the commuter trains when other people wanted quiet. For sure some people will on the phone to annoy other people. It'll be creating more tension while inflight. Right now when deplaning so many people are leaving things because of talking during deplaning instead of paying attention to what their doing. The business traveler with their laptops make enough noise right now banging their keys in FC.

It shouldn't take a major incident with an evacuation before someone realizes this is not a good idea.

Please don't allow this - we'll all be sorry.

Thanks for your time.
